

I am begging you to do nothing in the way of implementing any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Since the Indiana Telephone Privacy law went into effect, I have been amazed at how few unsolicited telephone calls I have received. In fact, as I think of it, the only unsolicited telephone calls that I have received in the past few months were some very obnoxious political phone calls immediately before the November elections. So, other than those calls, it has been a relief to once again have control over my privacy as well as my time.
